This year's Asia Media Woman of the Year is Anne Jakkaphong Jakrajutatip, Chief Executive Officer of listed Thai company, JKN Global Media.

Jakrajutatip founded JKN Global Media as an independent company five years ago and listed on the Thailand Stock Exchange in November 2017.

Her ongoing commitment to expanding the footprint of Thai content abroad is paired with her determination to open up new markets in Thailand for a range of Asian content.

In addition, Jakrajutatip leverages her position as a media leader to promote gender diversity issues – including the formal launch in July of the non-profit Lift (Life Inspired for Transsexuals) Foundation, founded last year to promote acceptance and inclusivity for transsexuals in Thailand.

JKN distributes programming from Asia (specifically from India and the Philippines) as well as feature films across multiple platforms in Thailand. JKN is also involved in content production, global content distribution and licensing management.

The company's business units include: JKN Channel Co Ltd, which owns and operates JKN Dramax, a cable/satellite TV channel focusing on Asian fantasy, Hollywood hits and specials. JKN Dramax produces the Anne Show and mega showcase events in Thailand. JKN IMC Co Ltd provides integrated marketing solutions, including advertising, production and airtime media buys. JKN News Co Ltd produces global financial news and business updates in Thai via a partnership with CNBC.

Past recipients of the Asia Media Woman of the Year Award are Ellana Lee (CNN International); Jane Jimenez-Basas (Cignal TV, Philippines); Janice Lee (PCCW Media, Hong Kong); Tham Loke Kheng (Mediacorp, Singapore/PCCW Media, Hong Kong/TBC, Taiwan/StarHub, Singapore); Charo Santos-Concio (ABS-CBN, Philippines); and Rohana Rozhan (Astro, Malaysia).
